The Beauty Bus [VIDEO]

I'm taking a beauty oncology treatment course in the next couple weeks, so I can serve people who've had or are in treatment for cancer.

September 7, 2018 By Amanda Hayes

The Beauty Bus — This is the next step I have planned for getting my life back on track. I understand that to some, my story may not seem so interesting now but this is where I want to make a difference to peoples' lives who are undergoing the crap that cancer gives.

It's fine if you are not in a position to donate but all I ask is that you share this so that I can get into a position where I can help those going through cancer and make them feel better… I'm sorry if you think I'm being massively cheeky… If I had the funding, then I totally wouldn't be asking and I'd go out tomorrow and get it all done, but this is where cancer can put you at a massive disadvantage, aside from the obvious, it kicks you down and keeps you down financially.

To donate or to share my idea with others, please take a look at my JustGiving page!

I would absolutely love to provide a salon experience on the doorstep, without the need of me invading any personal space. I've explained my idea in a little more depth in my recent vlog (above).

Thank you for taking an interest in my quest to help others! Hopefully soon, I'll be rolling up on my Beauty Bus near you!

This post originally appeared on Happy Smiling Cancer Girl on September 7, 2018. It is republished with permission.

© 2026 Smart + Strong All Rights Reserved.