Day 2,770 — In a Weird Place

I’m mentally exhausted from constantly thinking about this

June 20, 2018 By Dan Zeller

---

Every weekday, I pass by here on the way to or from my office, getting a not-so-subtle reminder, “Hey! You need to make a decision, yahoo!” A few weeks ago, that nagging voice carried a bit of weight. Today, not so much.

In fact, I’ve taken the ostrich approach over the last few weeks—burying my head deep in the sand, ignoring anything related to The Decision. I haven’t actively researched diddly-squat and that’s been liberating. I know that’s not a productive approach to the situation at hand, but I’m okay with that for now.

The best explanation that I have for being in this weird state of indifference and inaction is a simple one: I’m mentally exhausted from constantly thinking about this. I just needed to shut it down for a while.

I know I’ll have to get back in the groove someday (after the 1 August PSA test?), but for now, I’m enjoying the denial and the break.

This post originally appeared on Dan’s Journey through Prostate Cancer. It is republished with permission.

---

© 2026 Smart + Strong All Rights Reserved.

http://beta.docker.cancerhealth.com/blog/day-2770-weird-place