

Day 3,000!

I'm still here and still blogging (a reason to celebrate) — but now about recurrent cancer.
#CancerSucks

January 27, 2019 By Dan Zeller

Wow! Regular readers of this blog know that I'm a numbers guy and like tracking milestones and PSA.

Little did I think when I started this blog over eight years ago that I would still be writing about prostate cancer 3,000 days later. Of course, I was hoping that I'd have been "cured" by now, but that just wasn't in my cards. Oh well.

So the good news is that, after 3,000 days, I'm still here and still blogging (a reason to celebrate). The less good news is that, after 3,000 days, I'm still here and still blogging, but now about recurrent cancer. #CancerSucks

Thanks to everyone who's followed along for some or all of this journey, and who have offered insights, resources, and support along the way! —Dan

This post originally appeared on Dan's Journey through Prostate Cancer. It is republished with permission.
