

Day 3,505 – Change in PSA Test Plan

Sometimes getting your PSA test done means you have to be ready to make it happen sooner rather than later.

June 21, 2020 By Dan Zeller

My work schedule forced a little change in plan for getting my PSA test done. I was planning on going first thing tomorrow morning, but a 9:00 a.m. scheduled meeting was a little too close for comfort, and I wasn't sure that I could make it back to the office in time, so I left work a little early to have the blood drawn.

The clinic did do a COVID-19 screening of me before I could even enter the building, including taking my temperature. Surprisingly, there was no one in line for the lab, so I was in and out in under 10 minutes. I may make going later in the afternoon my new routine going forward. In the mornings, everyone wants to be the first one there, so you can wait for about an hour to get the test done.

If COVID isn't affecting lab processing and reporting times, I should be able to access my results online after 10 p.m. PST Wednesday.

This post originally appeared on Dan's Journey through Prostate Cancer on June 15, 2020. It is republished with permission.
