Day 3,508 – PSA Results

This short post is for those who have been watching and waiting along with me.

June 21, 2020 By Dan Zeller

---

Apparently, getting my blood drawn in mid-afternoon adds one day to getting my results. Needless to say, I'm pleased with the 0.14 ng/ml reading. It's down 0.02 from the last two times (excluding that oddball 0.08 reading in February).

This reading added 10 months to my PSA doubling time, so it's now out to 48.9 months according to the Memorial Sloan Kettering PSA Doubling Time Calculator.

My appointment with the doctor is on 2 July and we'll see how that goes. I suspect it will be another continue-to-monitor situation, and that's fine by me.

Have a great weekend and happy Father's Day to all the dads out there! Stay well!

This post originally appeared on Dan's Journey through Prostate Cancer on June 18, 2020. It is republished with permission.

---

© 2026 Smart + Strong All Rights Reserved.