Month 95 — Road Trip

San Diego is a great place, but it gets awfully brown this time of year after a long, dry summer without any rain. I wanted to see color. I needed to see something green.

October 11, 2018 By Dan Zeller

I had an idea for the topic of this month's post but I really never fully developed it because I was off gallivanting up and down California, Oregon, and Washington over the last week or so on an overly ambitious road trip. I'll work on fully baking my idea for a future post but, in the meantime, I'll leave you with a link to my travel blog where you can check out autumn in the Eastern Sierra Nevada mountains and the Olympic Peninsula of Washington. It was a great escape from all things work and cancer.

Enjoy! I sure did.

This post originally appeared on Dan's Journey through Prostate Cancer. It is republished with permission.

© 2026 Smart + Strong All Rights Reserved.