

Prostate Cancer, Month 178 – Urologist Appointment

Here's how prostate cancer blogger Dan Zeller prepares for an upcoming doctor's appointment.

October 2, 2025 By Dan Zeller

---

Given my recent posts on my PSA increasing, there really isn't much to talk about this month.

But the Urology clinic did call early Monday morning to reschedule my appointment. It's now on Tuesday, 7 October 2025. That's only a week after my originally scheduled appointment, so I can live with that.

I'll be collecting my thoughts and putting my list of questions together in advance of our meeting to get the most out of our time together. (Lately, I've been emailing my questions in advance to facilitate the discussion, assuming the doctor reads them more than five minutes before walking into the exam room.)

In the interim, I've got a date with jury duty in about two weeks. Instead of calling in to see if your service is needed, the county now has you report to the courthouse. Whether I get selected or not is another thing.

That's it. Be well!

This post originally appeared September 11, 2025, on Dan's Journey Through Prostate Cancer. It's republished with permission.

---